ENTERPRISE.

The Methodist church gave a Christmas tree on the Friday before Christmas and a tea-meeting on Christmas night. Both were well attended and the programmes were long and attractive.

A wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. Bell, on Christmas day, when their only daughter, Nellie May, was united in marriage to Earl B. Davey, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Davey. A wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride and the happy couple took the train for Toronto, on their honeymoon. They will visit the groom's sister in Toronto, after which they will return and reside in Enterprise.

Mrs. C. Brown and little daughter, of Verona, also Mr. and Mrs. A. Walker and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Wagar and family took dinner at German Wagar's on Christmas day.

Miss Martha Wagar spent Christmas visiting friends in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Walker and family are packing their furniture and will leave for Toronto this week.

Misses Florence, Luella and Verna Walker and Mar Wagar were at Orrus Wagar's on Sunday.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coleman of Enterprise, a daughter.

A number from here are expecting to attend the tea-meeting at Centreville on New Year's night.

BAY CENTRAL

Ice-boating is the order of the day. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moore spent Sunday at Mr. J. A. Moore's.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rennie and sons, have returned to their home in Toronto, after spending Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. McCabe.

Miss Mabel Perry is spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Perry.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Huffman and daughter, Toronto, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ashton McCabe.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Moore spent Christmas eve at Mr. Perry Brown's.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCabe will return home on Saturday after spending two weeks with relatives in Blanchard, Michigan.

On Monday afternoon a young colt which Mr. Clarence Moore was driving, took fright and ran away. No harm was done, except breaking the dashboard from the cutter.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown spent Christmas at their daughter's, Mrs. Jayne, Gosport.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Moore spent Christmas at Mr. D. Perry's.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Moore spent Christmas at Mr. D. A. McCabe's.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashton McCabe and son Clarence, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Huffman and daughter Gladys spent Christmas at Mr. Nelson Diamond, Bardolph.

The returning officer, Mr. W. A. Grange, declared Messrs. Wartman and Soby elected school trustees and Mr. J. L. Boyes resigned leaving Mr. Paul also elected by acclamation.

During the nominations as is the custom, the meeting heard from the candidates nominated. Mr. John Grange, the veteran chairman was the only voted chairman, and in his remarks asked the various speakers to be brief in their remarks, so that the opportunity to do so might be given to all.

Mr. R. Miller, in the absence of Mr. Alpine Woods, reviewed the work of the year and read the financial statement of the year.

Mr. Simpson gave a short review of the work of the town, stating that the council had kept fairly well within the appropriations and announced his intention to resign from the council.

Mr. A. Steacy announced his intention to run for a second year and asked for the support of the electors.

Mr. Alexander in asking for the support of the electors for mayor, stated that he had served in the council for many years and in view of his age would like to occupy the chair before retiring and had the field in view of the fact that Mr. Steacy had stated that he would not run for a second term. Mr. N. Osbourne occupied a good time endeavouring to explain his position with regard to the debenture sale by which the town lost $7.75 on the sale of debentures. He also gave an account of his stewardship in regard to county matters.

Mr. S. Casey Denison announced himself a candidate for Reeve for 1914 and also made a few remarks about the sale of debentures and some other matters. Mr. Osbourne's statements, occasioning some interruptions from Mr. Reeve Osbourne.

Mr. R. J. Dickinson asked the votes of the electors for the fourth time, and explained the overdraft in his committee as entirely due to extra expenditures necessitated by the clearing of the drill hall site and the building of the new machinery shed.

Mr. F. H. Carson asked the votes of the electors. As chairman of streets he gave street commissioner Lowry full credit for the excellence of the work performed this year on the appropriation allowed the streets.

Mr. G. T. Walters again asked the support of the electors. Mr. Walters was one of those who voted for the sale of the town's debentures to the first applicant at the higher price.

Messrs. W. T. Waller, C. A. Wiseman and Robt. Solmes, having no sins to answer for briefly asked the support of the electors.

MUST PASS TESTS.

Chauffeurs To Have Rigid Examination After Jan. 1st.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—After the New Year paid chauffeurs in the province will require special licenses. Legislation to this effect was arranged for last session with an eye to reducing the accidents on highways and making chauffeurs responsible for their passengers. The law now takes effect.

The method of the Government involves a system of resident engineers in different centres, all of whom belong to the Ontario Motor League. These have already been appointed in North and East Toronto, Ottawa, Peterboro, Chatham, Fort William, Woodstock, St. Thomas, North Bay, Sarnia, and other traffic centres. Arrangements are incomplete as yet for Toronto, Hamilton and London.

The examination will be conducted jointly by the district representative and a police chief. Things demanded include technical knowledge, oral rules, speed laws, a road test, and physical and character testimonials.

There are twenty-seven points in all and the examinations will be universal.

Policewoman Subdues Man.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30. — Mrs. Mary Boyd, one of Chicago's ten policewomen, is not a large woman, but she is muscular. Sunday she boarded a street car while a powerfully built man and the conductor were engaged in a fight about a transfer. Mrs. Boyd showed her star and separated the men, telling the passenger he was under arrest.

When he resisted the officer she pulled him from the car, stood him against a post, and rang for the patrol wagon. Mrs. Boyd rode to the station with her prisoner and preferred a charge of disorderly conduct against him.

Dr. Emma Musson Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30. — Dr. Emma E. Musson, professor of otology at the Women's Medical College, and well-known throughout the country as a throat specialist, died Sunday at her home in this city. She was 50 years old and had done much research work in bronchocopy. During the summer of 1909 she worked with Dr. Grenfell in Labrador, operating and giving medical assistance.

Dr. Musson was a leader in suffragette movements, and was a member of the County Medical Society and of the American Medical Association.

Comptroller Fortescue is sure of the message which he has received. It is not signed. It is very difficult and it may be that it comes from Indians who are purposely leading away from the actual scene or he is disposed to think is a time in which they have played. The Indians' fear of the moult lice also may have inspired the sage.

However, two patrols have come out from Grouard and Athabasca Landing and they are expected port to Ottawa in about a month the latest.

JEWELS ARE FOUND

Convict Divulges Hiding Place Gets a Parole.

BRANDON, Man., Dec. 30. — Ward W. Murphy, born in Toronto who was sentenced in 1905 to ten years' imprisonment for stealing jewelry worth $5,000 from the office of W. H. Mallett here, has been released on parole under unusual circumstances while still having years of sentence to serve.

Though Murphy was arrested shortly after the Mallett store entered by the window, the jewels were never recovered. Murphy's trial, offered to reveal the return for his liberty, and the offer when Capt. J. C. Poirer formerly of St. Thomas, Ont. charge this year of Stoney Mountain Penitentiary, where he was confined. The authorities at Ottawa agreed to grant him parole on condition that he recovered the jewels, and he was brought here guard.

After a long search, many marks having been removed in years, the jewels were found, hidden under the earth close C.P.R. roundhouse. Murphy will return to Toronto.

NEW CARTAGE SCHEDULE

Railways Put Increased Force on Jan. 1, 1914.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—The ways issued their new cartage schedule yesterday to take effect. They have established a rate of Montreal of four cents per pound, which is an increase of present rate of one cent. On the higher cost of cartage in Montreal and the shippers agreeing to pay a higher rate than at any eastern point.

The rates for the other center Toronto, 3 1-4 cents; Hamilton, 3 cents; and the following points: Bothwell, Brantford, Guelph, Hamilton, Kitchener, London, Ottawa, Sarnia, St. Catharines, St. Hyacinthe, St. Thomas, Valleyfield, Walkerton and Windsor.

The minimum in all cases cents. A feature of interest shippers is the addition to the exceptions to the flat tariff of lowering freight: Baskets, empty, furniture, (excepting brass iron bedsteads).

PIPED WATER A MILE

Montreal Firemen Take Heroic Measures With Blaze.

Dreaded Catastrophe Occurs While City Is Suffering From Water Famine But Efforts of Fire Department Keep Flames Isolated by Bringing Water From River—
Loss Over Quarter of a Million.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—Fire broke out at one o'clock yesterday afternoon on the premises of the Auto Garage Co., Ltd., at the corner of Ontario and Providence streets, in the north-east end of the city, and was caused by an explosion of gasoline. It spread with lightning rapidity, due to three other explosions, to adjoining buildings, threatening the whole block on St. Hubert street.

The firemen were without water pressure, owing to the break in the intake, and had to bring water from the river, a mile away. The loss will be about $285,000, with $40,000 insurance.

The heat from the raging conflagration grew so great that the firemen, with their one stream, were driven back. Chief Tremblay then had a consultation with his sub-chiefs, and it was decided that if the fire spread much further resort would be had to dynamiting buildings around it to check its march.

After an hour's work, during which every bit of hose that could be collected, had been connected up, the firemen were just able to throw one end of the chain into the St. Lawrence river, nearly a mile away from the scene of the fire.

A tremendous cheer broke from the firemen when the first few spurts of the river water came through and fell with a hiss on the heated buildings near the fire. With this the progress of the flames was checked.

While attempting to throw chemicals on the fire on the fourth storey of the Automobile & Garage Co.'s building, Fireman James Rollahan lost his balance and fell to the street. He was rushed to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where it was found that his condition was most critical.

A dropsical old man named Patinaude was rescued from one of the buildings, but may die of shock.

When the fire started the firemen and police saved 22 automobiles, but 60 were destroyed. The buildings destroyed were owned by Jos. Laurier and occupied by the Auto & Garage Co., the Decbul Tools, Ltd., and several manufacturing firms.

As a result of the blaze and the absence of adequate water supply for the firemen, some of the sufferers have announced their intention of taking suit against the city.

Water Famine Nearly Over.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30. — Without being too definite, Controller Godfrey expressed the opinion that water might be turned on to-day. The situation at present is the same as it has been since the pumps were shut down on Christmas night. Water carts continue to supply citizens and material relief in some sections has been effected by the Montreal Water & Power Co. The lack of water has seriously affected the laundries and the drivers have had to advise clients to hold their orders until Friday. In those laundries where water is available, the management has been sup-

LAKES FUND IS $105,000.

Dispensing of Relief to Disaster Victims Begins To-day.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—H. H. Gilder- sleeve, general treasurer of the Lakes Disaster Fund, said last night that over $105,000 had been subscribed to the fund launched following the disastrous storm on Lake Huron on Nov. 9 last when several ships, officials and many sailors were lost. While the fund has been closed, straggling subscriptions continue to come in.

A meeting of the committee having charge of the fund will be held this afternoon at the office of Mayor Hocken in the City Hall, when it is expected that final arrangements will be made for the dispensing of the fund to members and relatives of the ill-fated crews who were lost in the storm.

"The committee feel very grateful towards the public for the generous response," said Mr. Gildersleeve, "and we can assure the public that the money will be dispensed and distributed with the utmost care."

Mr. Gildersleeve stated that since the fund was started the committee had had agents inquiring as to the circumstances and needs of the relatives and families of officials and sailors lost in the storm, in order that the sufferers would receive just compensation.

KENT CAN GROW CORN!

Children's Contest Shows Marvellous Yield Per Acre.

CHATHAM, Dec. 30. — Yesterday the announcement was made that in this northern climate of Kent 142 bushels of shelled corn to the acre have been grown by D. A. Caughill, a school boy, under the supervision of the Department of Education, which will vouch for the accuracy of the plot measurements and the weight of the corn grown. Another boy, John Wilson, had a yield of over 135 bushels, and a little girl, Edna Wills, secured 135 bushels per acre.

The above mentioned boys and girls were members of a corn-growing contest in Harwich Township that was organized by R. H. Abraham of the Department of Education. The object in having the contest was mainly to test the Wisconsin No. 7 corn, to try to find out if it was a suitable corn to recommend for Kent County. Pure Wisconsin No. 7 seed was secured and distributed to two hundred boys and girls who planted one-eighth of an acre in plots isolated from other corn fields.

Skater Drowned.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—The first of the winter's skating fatalities occurred at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, when George Simmons, 18, 88 Morris street, skated to his death on the treacherous ice off Morley avenue, near the city's septic tank.

With Simmons at the time of the tragedy were two companions, one named Waters, also of Morris street, and another whom the police have as yet been unable to locate.

GERMANY HOLDS OFF.

She Refuses To Give U. S. Tariff Preference Asked For.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—Germany yester- day refused the request of the United States Government for the "most favored nation" treatment of American steel, rubber shoes, etc., but it was hinted that she was willing to bargain for this concession if the United States would make an equivalent offer in return for it.

The reply of the German Govern- ment to the application of the U. S. Government points out various fea- tures of the American tariff law, namely, the inspection of the books of manufacturers and the administra- tive regulations, which Germany would like to see changed.

Commercial circles here express the opinion that the German-Ameri- can tariff negotiations will be ex- tremely difficult without some such method of bargaining.

"Mona Lisa" on View Again.

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 30.—The "Mona Lisa," which was Sunday handed over to the keeping of the French ambassador at Rome, arriv- ed here yesterday and was placed on exhibition in the Brera gallery. Great crowds gathered to view the master- piece, which was first inspected by the Count of Turin and the civic au- thorities.

A special medal has been coined to commemorate the event. It bears the head of Leonardo da Vinci, and the inscription, "May her divine smile ever shine."

British Schooner Wrecked.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Com- mander E. L. Tasman Is Badly Damaged.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 30.—A wireless message received at noon yesterday from the steamer Tasman, ashore in the Gulf of Papua; reported 15 feet of water in the hold and gaining rapidly. At that hour the steamers which had been de- spatched to the assistance of the T s man had not arrived. It is consid- erable possible that the Tasman will be a total wreck.

HE WAS A GOOD SOLDIER.

And His Loss Was Deplored by Paul I., the Half Mad Czar.

In Waleszewski's life of Paul I., the half mad son of Catherine the Great, occurs the following anecdote illustra- tive of the workings of the disorgan- ized mind. It seems that in a report on military affairs submitted to the Emperor Paul the final syllable kij of the Russian word for cornet or ensign was carried over from one page to an- other.

The emperor took it for a proper name, and, moved by a caprice, he gave orders that Ensign Kij should be promoted to the rank of lieutenant. He saw an expression of embarrass- ment and disappointment on the faces of the staff, who did not dare to ex- plain his error; so the next day he promoted the lieutenant of the day be- fore to the rank of captain and some days later to that of colonel, demand- ing that the officer should be present- ed to him at once. There was con- sternation everywhere. The offices were turned upside down in search of the imaginary Kij.

A subaltern of the name or some- thing like it was found in one of the regiments quartered on the Don. He was sent for, but Paul grew impa- tient, and in the end he had to be told that Kij had been carried off sudden- ly by a stroke.

"That is a pity," observed the czar. "He was a good soldier."

No evidence of violence was found on the body, and no poison was found in her stomach. The autopsy report showed that for several days raw corn was her only food. It was also found that she had not been criminally assaulted, which entirely does away with the idea that she had been enticed away by white slavers. The characteristics of her head, however, were such that she might have been liable to delusions and demented states.

THREE REGIMENTS REVOLT.

Chinese Uprising In Southwestern China Is Reported.

PEKIN, Dec. 30.—A revolt of three regiments of the Chinese army under the leadership of Gen. Yang Hupin, is reported from Laidu, in the far southwestern Province of Yun- nan, about 100 miles from the fron- tier of Burma.

The soldiers, on Dec. 8, shot down their officers, raided the armory, killed a professor and then proclaimed the independence of the province in the name of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, former Provisional President of China.

Yang Hupin was surprised and burned to death in a house where he was hiding in a neighboring village.

The surrounding country is said to be terrorized by the remaining muti- neers, who have looted many places. A column of loyal troops has been despatched from Yunnanfu to restore order.

To Probe Will Mystery.

ROME, Dec. 30.—The crown prose- cutor has begun an investigation into the matter of the will of the late Cardinal Rampolla. He has been en- abled to take this action because of the denunciation of the testament of 1889 by relatives of the cardinal, who were excluded as beneficiaries from his will, on the ground that a later testament has been stolen or con- cealed.

One of the interested parties in the new move is the Duchess of Cam- pobello, who is of the opinion that her children may be included in a later testament, the testament of 1889 antedating their birth.

No woman wants to look old. Many in their effort to look youthful resort to the "beauty doctor's" prescriptions. Their mistake is that they visit the wrong department in the drug store.

Beauty depends upon health. Worry, sleepless nights, headaches, pains, disorders, irregularities and weaknesses of a distinctly feminine character in a short time bring the dull eye, the "crow's feet," the haggard look, drooping shoulders, and the faltering step.

To retain the appearance of youth you must retain health. Instead of lotions, powders and paints, ask your druggist for

TO REMOVE THE DAMS

A. W. Benjamin, of Yarker, a member of the Napanee River improvement company, informs the Whig that there is another side to the story of that company injuriously affecting the health of the people of Portland and Hinchinbrook townships by maintaining its dams along the Napanee river. He disputes the charges made by the legislative members of Frontenac and Addington, by the Reeves of the two above-named townships and by the health officer of Eastern Ontario. Mr. Benjamin desires to state the company's side of the case.

He says that for many years prior to 1806, the waters of the Napanee river and its tributaries were being utilized for mechanical purposes. For over twenty miles from the mouth of the river, there was almost a continuous line of industrial concerns. Those farthest up the stream and nearest the storage basins had a very decided advantage over those mills lower down the stream, as they were in a position to regulate the flow of the stream as best suited their personal advantage, and, by unduly suspending the flow, could greatly inconvenience their competitors lower down. This practice became so pernicious that it finally became necessary to come to some arrangement whereby all would be treated alike. So, with this end in view, an application was made to parliament for an act of incorporation, of all the then mill owners, as well as subsequent owners. Accordingly, an act was passed incorporating the Napanee River Improvement company, with full power to erect and construct suitable dams or reservoirs for the retarding of the waters, and for improving, increasing and regulating the supply of water, and further, giving the said corporation power to take, use, enter upon and occupy any lands and to construct any dams or reservoirs they may deem expedient upon or along the waters of the Napanee River and its tributaries, for the object of improving and increasing the supply of water therein for manufacturing purposes and generally do all things necessary for the accomplishing of the same and ect. (See 29-30 Vict. Chapter 84.)

It might be well to note just here, he said, that all the lands affected or to be affected by any acts of the river improvement company, were then held by the crown, and, he understands that one of the conditions of the incorporation was that the Napanee Improvement company should cause to be surveyed the lands that would be affected, and that a copy of the plan and survey should be filed with the crown lands department, so that in issuing patents, the crown might make the necessary reservation for flooding. He is credibly informed that a copy of that survey is now on record in the crown lands department and that the right of the corporation to flood these lands, was incorporated in the patents issued subsequent thereto, so that the corporation is acting quite within its rights in flooding the lands complained of.

To return to the main question, however, it may be said that the Napanee Improvement company by taking charge of the dams and regulating the flow of the water, naturally improve the condition of the water supply to the various mills, but it was soon found that in order to get the maximum results, it was necessary to buy the Petworth mills which consisted of a saw mill, woolen and grist mill, remove the Petworth mill dam and deepen the channel of the river from the foot of the lake dam to near the old mill dam and regulate the flow of water by means of stop logs in the cut or artificial channel. This was done at an expenditure of about ten thousand dollars and the results seem to have fully justified the expenditure.

From this time forward, everything went along fairly well with the company, the mill owners and the settlers until along about 1905, when the Rathbun company began to curtail its lumbering operations on this stream, later, ceased altogether and finally selling a large acreage of their holdings in Hinchinbrook to settlers for fifty cents an acre, reserving the right to flood. The Napanee River Improvement company also acquired from the Rathbun company certain lands sold to settlers. The settlers who purchased these lands from the Rathbun company now attempt to repudiate the right of the Rathbun company or the Napanee River Improvement company, to flood, and while it cannot establish their claim in law, it has taken more drastic measures and resorted to vandalism unheard of, as the following record will show: Fifth Depot lake dam burned out in 1907; fifth lake dam rebuilt of concrete, having a lateral strain factor safety of ten and a half times. This dam was dynamited and partly blown out in July, 1910, when the watchman and his family were sleeping within 100 feet of the dam. The damaged portion was repaired with timber. In April last, 1913, the portion of the concrete dam was blown out, presumably by dynamite. Since then, the wooden portion that was erected in 1910 has been burned out. Just about month previous to the dam being destroyed the watchman's house was burned to the ground, within two days from the time it was vacated and before another watchman could be got there to protect the property.

Since then, the company has sustained an action for damages for the death of George Hudson, who was drowned in the flood waters, owing to the removal of the dam, judgment being reserved. He also learns that after consultation between Mr. Rankin and Mr. Black and the Reeves of Portland and Hinchinbrook, that they have decided to institute an action in the high court to compel us to remove our dams. Mr. Benjamin says he is fully aware of the use that certain gentlemen have made of the Napanee River Improvement company for political and municipal purposes, so this threatened action does not cause the company any concern, but he is surprised that any government will allow the reign of dynamiting and incendiarism to continue for a period of six years without making an effort to stop it.

"If the Reeves and our M.P.P.'s would direct their attention to the suppression of this vandalism, rather than trying to embarrass the Napanee River Improvement Co., and seriously effecting the commercial life of twenty-five industries, five flourishing villages, the town of Napanee, and in a very large measure the city of Kingston, it would be much more to their credit," declared Mr. Benjamin.

"Think," he says, "what would be the effect if these men were to accomplish what they contemplate. Every industry on the Napanee river, including the Town of Napanee, and up, covering a distance of fifteen miles, would be retired from business, most of them ruined, and the large concerns would look for larger locations elsewhere. Three hundred employees would be out of work. Not only would the industrial plants be worthless, but the savings of these laborers and mechanics, which are tied up in their little homes, would be gone. They could not be sold as there would be no one to occupy them and the ing the Town of Napanee, and up, covering a distance of fifteen miles, would be retired from business, most of them ruined, and the large concerns would look for larger locations elsewhere. Three hundred employees would be out of work. Not only would the industrial plants be worthless, but the savings of these laborers and mechanics, which are tied up in their little homes, would be gone. They could not be sold as there would be no one to occupy them and the owner would have to abandon them and go elsewhere for work. What would be the effect upon the merchant, doctor, blacksmith, in fact, everyone dependent upon these industries for a very large part of their living? The city of Kingston alone would lose thousands of dollars annually. These are matters that our politicians should consider rather than some personal advantage that might accrue to themselves and if the politician thinks his personal safety is the first consideration it is time the elector of every community, independent of party leanings, took the matter up in concrete form and make a stand for our commercial existence, for in unity there is strength."

At its recent session, the County Council of Lennox and Addington passed a resolution, asking that no interference be made by the Ontario government with the company's dams until a full investigation had been instituted. Those counties are more interested than the townships of Portland and Hinchinbrook, because the dams are largely in the Township of Camden. The resolution passed was as follows:

"Whereas the attention of the County Council of the county of Lennox and Addington, has been called to the alleged fact that representations have been made to the government of the province of Ontario, that the dams maintained by the Napanee River Improvement company, upon the Napanee river and the lakes flowing into it, should be reduced in height, or removed altogether. And whereas it is alleged that the reduction in height or the removal of said dams would be disastrous to many long established manufacturers upon the Napanee river dependent upon maintenance of said dams for their water power, and whereas it is alleged that maintenance of said dams does not injuriously affect the health of anyone residing in the vicinity thereof, as can be clearly established by an examination of the vital statistics from said districts and by an impartial and thorough investigation of the experiences of the regular physicians in said districts, and whereas it is alleged that no hardship is caused to the owners of lands alleged to be flooded by the maintenance of said dams, as the owners thereof purchased the same with a full knowledge of the rights and privileges of the said company.

"Therefore be it resolved by the said council in regular session assembled, that this council desires no interference by the government with the said dams without a full investigation into the allegations above set forth with right to the Napanee River Improvement company to furnish on such investigation such evidence relating thereto as they may deem advisable, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the lieutenant-governor-in-council of the province of Ontario."

Portugal's Wonderful Climate

The climate of Portugal is the wonderful in Europe. A crowd of scores of thousands annually to the Riviera from every corner of Europe in order to enjoy the posed maximum of sunshine, but to be undeceived by weeping skies and the cruel mistral as a certainty. At Lisbon, on the other hand, weather as understood elsewhere is literally unknown. The temperature is not only higher than that of the Riviera, but is equable to a degree almost defies belief. What this in practical effect is illustrated in fact that in March last I met a lady on board ship who had been six weeks at Mont d'Estoril, near Lisbon, and had bathed in the sea day in February. Christmas Not a Humbug.

"Christmas a humbug, uncle?" said Scrooge's nephew. "You don't mean that, I'm sure."

"I do," said Scrooge. "Merry Christmas! Out upon Merry Christmas! What's Christmas time for you but a time for paying bills without money, a time for finding yourself a year older and not an hour richer, a time for balancing your books and having every item in 'em brought a round dozen of months presented dead against you? If I could work my will every idiot who goes about with 'Merry Christmas' on his lips should be boiled with his own pudding and buried with a stake of holly through his heart. He should!"

It is many years since the conversion of old Scrooge from the error of his ways by the three ghosts of Christmas past, Christmas present and Christmas yet to come. It is many more years since the first Christmas anthem rang triumphant in the bush of an expectant midnight hour over the plains of Palestine. And yet, in spite of the years and their message to the world, there still exist those unfortunate souls who, like the wretched Ebenezer, call Christ-

PASTOR RUSSELL

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 28.—Pastor Russell spoke twice here to-day. We report his discourse from the text, "Unto Me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear." — Isaiah 45:23.

Our careless reading of this passage, said the Pastor, has led some to assume that the bowing of the knee and the confession of the tongue will be a mere formality, while hearts are still in rebellion. A careful reading, however, notes that these acts will be to the glory of God. This insures a genuine adoration; for the Master declared that the Father seeketh only such as worship in spirit and in truth. St. Paul quotes this text, and adds that it includes things in Heaven as well as on earth. In other words, the great work which Jesus, as the Father's Representative, will yet accomplish, will bring Him fame, glory and homage amongst angels and men.

Sufferings First and Glory Afterward.

The Pastor then reminded his audience that comparatively few knees bow and tongues yet confess on earth, although Jesus has been highly exalted in Heaven. He declared that it seems necessary for God's people to realize that much confusion and error exist, and to feel heartily ashamed of our unreasonable conclusions — human creeds. The central teaching of the Bible is that Jesus' death was necessary as man's Redemption price. This is clearly set forth by the Apostles, as well as by the types of the Law.

The worldly-wise scoff at the thought that the shedding of blood is necessary to man's forgiveness, and the rolling away of the curse. Shedding of blood is merely another way of saying sacrificial death. The Bible assures us that the sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die," was placed upon Father Adam because of disobedience; and that eye heredity it has come down to us—his legacy of evil, sorrow, weakness, alienation from God, death.

The Pastor demonstrated that the Supreme Judge of the Universe could not set aside the death sentence of His own Court, and yet be just. There can be no forgiveness of original sin, and no opportunity for life everlasting except by a redemption—a payment of the original penalty. Here we see Divine Wisdom and Mercy. God provided that Adam alone should be on trial and only he should be sentenced. Thus He prepared the way for redemption—that as by a man came death, by a Man also should come the resurrection from ways by the three ghosts of Christmas past, Christmas present and Christmas yet to come. It is many more years since the first Christmas anthem rang triumphant in the hush of an expectant midnight hour over the plains of Palestine. And yet, in spite of the years and their message to the world, there still exist those unfortunate souls who, like the wretched Ebenezer, call Christ- mas a humbug and lose sight of the real spirit and joy of the day.

"Christmas a humbug?" one is moved to exclaim with old Scrooge's indig- nant nephew. No, not a humbug, but a feast of good cheer, of kindly im- pulses, of generous giving, if hearts are opened and sympathies allowed free play, if cynicism is barred and pesti- mistic philosophy banished to the lim- bo of all unpleasantness. For the very essence of the spirit of Christmas is that of kindness, of affection.

When the flame of the real spirit of Christmas is dim or altogether dead there are a dozen ways of fanning it into renewed life. So many things combine to foster the Christmas at- mosphere, to make it, as Scrooge's nephew said, "a kind, forgiving, char- itable, pleasant time, the only time in the long calendar of the year when men and women seem, by one consent, to open their shut-up hearts freely and to think of people below them as if they really were fellow passengers to the grave and not another race of crea- tures bound on other journeys."

Make Your Brains Count.

The fellow with brains and with energy to direct them is pretty likely to succeed, no matter what's pulling him down. If you're not succeeding have a heart to heart talk with your- self. Maybe you haven't so many brains as you have been giving your- self credit for, or maybe you don't know how to use them to get results. Have a ten minute talk with your- self every night, and do it in the coldest blooded way you possibly can. Every little failure of the day should be analyzed; every opportunity you have let pass you uncaught should be used as a club on your brain. Then avoid those errors to-morrow.

On Her Mind.

Speaking of a lobbyist whose lobby had failed, a Senator said: "He tried to accept defeat with urbanity, but unconsciously he showed his chagrin. Poor chap, he resembled Mrs. Smythe. Mrs. Smythe called on a friend, expecting to be asked to stayed for luncheon. But the friend didn't ask her, and so Mrs. Smythe, secretly much disappointed and put out, rose to go. She didn't intend in the least to show her regret, but involuntarily, as she put out her hand, she said, 'Well, goodbye, dear Mrs. Luncheon.'"

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—At the Mont- real Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week end- ing Dec. 27, were 700 cattle, 1800 sheep and lambs, 3000 hogs and 100 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 350 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 100 calves.

The trade in cattle today was very quiet, and the demand limited. There were no really choice steers on the mar- ket, but good stock sold at $3.25 to $3.50, and even the offerings of this class were small. Demand for common cattle was slow.

A feature of the small-meat trade was the stronger feeling in the market for lambs, and prices scored a further ad- vance of 25c per 100 pounds, with a good demand, and sales of western stock were made at $9.20 to $9.25 per 100 pounds. Calves were quiet and steady. A strong- er feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds. The demand from packers was good, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.75, and straight lots at $9.25 to $9.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.75 to $9; do., medium, $7 to $8; do., common, $6 to $6.50; canners, $4.50 to $5; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6 to $6.50; do., bulls, $5.25 to $7.25; milkers, choice, each, $90 to $95; do., common and medium, each, $80 to $85; springers, $70 to $75.

Sheep—Ewes, $5.50 to $6; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.25. Lambs, $9 to $9.25.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.25 to $9.75.

Calves, $5 to $20.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—Cattle—Receipts, 23,000; market steady. Beefsteers, $6.70 to $9.60; Texas steers, $6.90 to $7.90; stock- ers and feeders, $5 to $7.45; cows and heifers, $3.50 to $8.60; calves, $7 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 35,000; market strong; light, $7.65 to $8; mixed, $7.75 to $8.10; heavy, $7.70 to $8.15; rough, $7.70 to $7.80; pigs, $6.75 to $7.70; bulk of sales, $7.85 to $8.05.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 25,000; market strong; native, $4.75 to $6.10; yearlings, $5.85 to $7.10. Lambs, native, $6.75 to $8.35.

Shot By Accident.

THESSALON, Dec. 30.—Two boys, Thomas Wardell and J. Boyd, living near Thessalon, were playing together when the latter picked up a shot- gun, which accidentally went off, piercing Wardell's body completely and killing him almost instantly. Dr. Spence, coroner of Thessalon, inquired into the circumstances and con- cluded that the shooting was acci- dental.

Three Miners Killed.

BICKNELL, Ind., Dec. 30.—Three men were killed and four injured yester- day at the Indian Creek Mine, four miles south of here when a gas ex- plosion occurred. The dead are: Emery Williams, Robert Cotton and an unidentified man. The four in- jured are buried in the mine. Little damage was done to the mine.

Big Fire at Buffalo, W. Va.

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio, Dec. 30.—The business section of Buffalo, W. Va., situated sixteen miles east of here, was destroyed by fire of mysterious origin early yesterday. The loss is estimated at $125,000. The insur- ance is small.

There can be no forgiveness of origi- al sin, and no opportunity for life everlasting except by a redemption—a payment of the original penalty. Here we see Divine Wisdom and Mercy. God provided that Adam alone should be on trial and only he should be sentenced. Thus He prepared the way for redemption—that as by a man came death, by a Man also should come the resurrection from the dead.

Not the Father, But the Son, Died.

Then the Pastor showed conclu- sively from Scripture that the Heav- enly Father did not compel the son to die for us; but that He presented His Plan to the Son, and the Son voluntarily carried out the work. Nor was this contract without reward. St. Paul assures us that for the joy set before Him, Jesus endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at God's right hand.

The speaker next showed that the Logos, the Son, a spirit being, could become man's Redeemer only by be- coming a man — "The Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a Ransom for all." The Greek word antilutron, ransom, signifies a corresponding price. Bulls and goats could not be a corresponding price; neither could angels, nor even the Logos Himself; for they were not on the same plane of being. Thus the Scriptures ex- plains that it was necessary for the Logos to become a Man, in order to effect a Ransom for Adam.

The Pastor then pointed out the folly of Christians who delude them- selves into thinking that the whole world has had a blessing through Christ ever since He died, and that the millions that died before He tasted death for every man have also been blessed. None but the Church class thus far have received a bless- ing from Jesus.

"The Election Hath Obtained It."

Next the Pastor declared that the key to the matter is found in Romans 11. There St. Paul draws attention to the fact that in rejecting Jesus Israel rejected God's chiefest bless- ing, but are "still beloved for the father's sake." He says, "The Elec- tion hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded."

This elect class are to constitute the Messianic Kingdom class. That Kingdom, invisible to men, yet all powerful in their midst, will bring to pass all the glorious promises of the Bible. The Times of Restitution will turn the earth into a paradise, and bring mankind back into the image and likeness of God, lost in Eden, restored by Calvary.

To Exploit Falls.

British and Canadian capital may finance a $2,500,000 project to build a suspended raceway to tap one-half of the waterfall from the Canadian Falls and one-half from the Ameri- can Falls at Niagara and carry the water through the Nigara River to a point where a great power plant will be erected for the creation and dis- tribution of electricity.

Rain Time.

There is more rain between Sep- tember and March than between March and September, and the reason is that in the autumn the tempera- ture of the air is continually decreas- ing, and on this account the capacity of the atmosphere for holding vapor is diminished so that it descends in the shape of rain.

Makes Him Mark Time.

"His wife is a business woman, all right."

"What makes you say that?"
"She's installed a time clock in the hall, and he has to punch it when he goes out nights and when he gets back."

ECONOMICS OF LOCAL OPTION

On Monday next, the citizens of Napanee will show by their votes whether they will barter their glorious heritage as free men of the British Empire for a "Mess of pottage" to the group of Toronto agitators, none of whom have one penny piece of interest in Napanee, or the surrounding countries or whether they will continue with the grandest kind of option possible, viz. the option of using the hotels or not as their wisdom dictates.

A bitter fight has been waged, in an endeavor to disorganize the habits and customs of the sober and freedom loving people of this town and to what end? It is the desire of the paid executive of the Dominion Alliance of Toronto to impose on the people of Napanee a reckless piece of legislation which they cannot get away with in their own home or town. Were it possible to furnish proofs that the Local Option by-law is an effective measure of temperance reform, thinking men would hesitate before turning it down. But these proofs are not forthcoming. The voice of every responsible thinker in the British Empire is raised against the by-law. The voice of the Bishops of the Church of England both in Great Britain and Canada is raised against it. The voice of the Roman Catholic Church, the Pontiff and the Cardinals is raised against it. The voices of the business men in the municipalities where Local Option prevails are raised against it. The criminals records are against it; vital statistics are against it; the returns from jails and asylums are against it; the Bible itself is against the contention of the prohibitionists.

Who then raises its voice in its praises, none but the Toronto agitators who have a money interest in the waging of these fights where citizens are being turned against one another; where the customs of communities are being recklessly and wantonly tampered with; where civic plans are disorganized by a law, which inflicting a hardship upon sober people of Napanee, and the travelling public, stimulates the passions of the drunkard and brings into existence scores of unregulated dives to take the place of the six hotels now conducted under government license and government supervision. The local people who have been misled into the prosecution of the fight by interested parties in Toronto are the people who do not use the hotels, but the present system while affording accommodation to those desirous of using hotels does not insist that any person not wanting the hotel should do so. It is a fight waged by those people who do not want something, to prevent those people who do not want that thing from having it.

In their blind zeal, our local optionists see but one angle of the subject and that a very distorted one. For instance, no thought of the effect on local economics is taken. Let any thinking man imagine what will happen to our civic finances if eight licenses are taken away.

From each license a sum of $350 is levied, making a total of $2800. The provincial license department returns $1,112 of this to the municipality. Under local option, the chairman of the finance committee would straight away have to face the problem of finding some other source from which to get the $1,112. But this is but the beginning, a small feature of the effect on local economics.

Consider the depreciation of values of the eight properties now held by violent contests between fanati the one side and indignant oppo the other side.

The Personal Liberty League is ready to assist the country in reasonable measure for the prevention of drunkenness, providing that and this alone is the honest purpose that no attempt is made to interfere with the supply of sober people that no man's business is confiscated.

Do not be swayed by passion or judge. Poll your vote for personal liberty, for freedom with sober. Hold fast to your right to reason refreshment and the equally reasonable facilities for obtaining it, that while you do not interfere with the mode of living of the total abster and the prohibitionist shall interfere with your mode of living.

A REVIEW OF THE SITUATION

Now that the campaign for against Local Option is nearly close, what has been made certain beyond all doubt or question?

1. That Local Option is a splendid success, in all those municipalities where it has been tested. Statements to this have come from all the leading cities of the municipalities concerned as Mayors, Police Magistrates, Ministers, Merchants, Manufacturers, Editors, etc. In Orillia a mayor has been signed by all the matrons with the exception of brewer to the effect that Local Option has materially benefitted the city. Twenty-five prominent citizens Campbellford signed a manifesto the same effect. It is significant that those who have signed statements the contrary are not the leading prominent citizens. Contrast signatures from Galt with the signatures from Campbellford. Mr. F. son, the police magistrate for sell, who spoke in the town at the 23rd inst., declared that Local Option was giving the best satisfaction in that town, that the town was improved, that hotel accommodation was better than ever in the history of the town, that drunkenness was to be seen in the streets, that in a word the people were delighted with the results of Option. This ought to be enough to convince the people of Napanee.

REVIEW OF THE SITUATION

w that the campaign for and st Local Option is nearing its what has been made certain be all doubt or question? That Local Option is a success—ndid success, in all those muni- cities where it has been fairly l. Statements to this effect come from all the leading citizens e municipalities concerned, such yors. Police Magistrates, Priests, ters, Merchants, Manufacturers, rs, etc. In Orillia a manifesto en signed by all the manufac- s with the exception of the r to the effect that Local Option naterially benefitted the town. ty-five prominent citizens of bellford signed a manifesto to me effect. It is significant that who have signed statements to ntrary are not the leading or nent citizens. Contrast the aures from Galt with the signa- from Campbellford. SIBERIAN WEALTH.

Amazing Resources of Southeastern Plains.

A recent traveler in the Amur River country of eastern Siberia speaks of wonderful possibilities of development there. The whole country appeared fine and promising. There are wide plains, wholly uncultivated, on which grows excellent grass, about three feet high, of fine texture. These plains, it is estimated, would support millions of sheep or cattle. The soil is of good quality and of a deep black.

In the gardens and plantations where settlements have arisen beautiful crops of all descriptions were to be seen—wheat, barley, oats and potatoes in abundance. Through the last 600 miles to the sea the country is one expanse of splendid forest, both on Russian and Chinese territory. In every mountain gully there were Chinese prospectors seeking gold. A hundred million people could be settled in this white man's country.

Easily navigable, the Amur provides a great natural highway for traffic from end to end. It is strange that neither the Chinese on the south nor the Russians on the north appear to develop the resources of the country. There are signs of progress, however. The chief of these is that wheat and barley are being harvested by reapers and binders—probably for the first time in Asia.

LOCAL OPTION NOTES.

Farmers Endorse Local Option

Over Three Hundred Farmers say They Favor the Passing of Local Option in Napanee. Will the Merchants Respond to the Farmers' Request?

We, the undersigned farmers desire to endorse the effort being made to carry Local Option in Napanee and wish to assure the business men that if it is carried we will continue to give our trade and support to the town as formerly.

We desire that the expression of our feeling in this matter be given publicity in Napanee.

country.

It is strange that neither the Chinese on the south nor the Russians on the north appear to develop the resources of the country. There are signs of progress, however. The chief of these is that wheat and barley are being harvested by reapers and binders—probably for the first time in Asia.

It is estimated that 100,000 workers enter the country every year from Europe. Farming, mining, lumbering and fishing are the chief industries.

A country which should be exporting millions of bushels of wheat and might in course of time become the chief source of the European supply is now importing bags of flour. The principal minerals are gold, copper and coal. Blagoveshchensk is the centre of an increasing gold mining industry, and so plentiful is gold that it was humorously said to be reckoned not by the ounce but by the pood, a Russian weight equal to 36 pounds.

As to the antiquity of Chinese industry in this part of Siberia there are evidences that the gold mines were worked by them centuries ago. Growing out of some of the old workings are trees of great size and age.

HUMAN HEREDITY.

It Is Confined, So It Is Asserted, to a Likeness to Parents.

There are few subjects on which so much "scientific" nonsense is talked and written as on heredity. Not very much is known of it as regards plants, less of animals and almost nothing as regards humanity. To read books on heredity, especially those of the Eugenic society, is to read a mass of suppositions and hazardous inductions where most of the facts are negative and only the exceptions are positive.

The very meaning of "hereditary" is not understood. If any quality is truly hereditary then it is always hereditary. It never occurs except as the result of heredity, and it is constant—that is to say, it invariably follows. But there is no quality of which this can be said. That genius is not hereditary is known. Even talent is not. Nor is any aptitude. A lawyer's son more often wants to be a soldier or an artist than a lawyer, notwithstanding the environment, and it is so with most professions. The exceptions seem to be due to training and influence, not to hereditary transmission.

A superficial likeness to parents seems hereditary, but that is all that we can assert, and that outward likeness by no means infers an inward likeness. There is nothing so easy and nothing so fatal as this tendency to attribute to heredity what is due to training or want of training. It excuses supineness in governments and professions.—H. Thin Cutting.

When Irvin Cobb, the writer, was on the World he attended a ball game at the Polo grounds. The yard was packed. Just before the game Harry Stevens, who had the refreshment privilege, strolled by the press box and called out to a group of which Cobb was a member:

"Great crowd, eh, boys? I'll bet there's 6,000 more people here than they expected. I guess that means I'll have to go in and prepare about 4,000 more ham sandwiches."

"Well," remarked Cobb, "that will pretty nearly necessitate the cutting of another ham, won't it, Harry?"—Everybody's.

Green Liquid Soap.

Green liquid soap, which is recommended by skin specialists for fine skins or for those which have the pores extended, can be made at home. Take equal parts of glycerin, water, alcohol and green castle soap. Shave the soap into the water and stir over the fire until the mixture is smooth. Add the glycerin and lastly, after the kettle is removed from the fire, the alcohol. Add a tablespoonful of eau de cologne, if perfume is desired.

Modern research has brought to our industries at a marvelous rate not only new compounds, but even new elements. Of the fifty metallic elements now known only seven were in use 2,000 years ago, and until 100 years ago, the rate of addition was less than one metal for each two centuries. Within the last twenty-five years about fourteen metals have been added to commercial use, an addition at more than one hundred-fold the previous rate.

Underrating Him.

"My dear boy, I happen to know you mortgaged your house and lot in order to buy that motorcar. How are you managing to keep it in repair?"

"No trouble about that. I give an occasional mortgage on some bits of personal property. From the way you talk, Uncle Henry, one would think I hadn't any business capacity at all."

Not To Be Deceived.

Analyze The Statement

To the Electors :

Once again the Local Option Napanee are asking for your support in their endeavor to pass the Option By-Law in Napanee. You have received their circular which they point out "Some and Figures." We give them credit for being honest in belief that Local Option will panacea for many of the ills that our town, as well as every town in the Province of Ontario, but you it to yourself to analyze their arguments before accepting them. In truth, are they possible facts? Do they fully realize Local Option means and what dangers follow in the wake of passing of the measure?

In the first place the passing of local option by-law means the enforcement of wise restraint and curtailing acts out of the hands of the Government and its inspectors and virtually places it in the hands of the people. What do we find in like Collingwood, where the town has been full of blind pigs, immense quantities of liquor illegally sold, according to sworn evidence—and the fact is, that those who were so ardent in endeavor to pass the by-law, apply, are not one bit particular with the law it now enforced or not—the continual disgraceful police scenes there.

Do you want similar "blind conditions to exist in Napanee? You want your husband, your brother or son to become like a thief or hunted criminal, in these foul places? Who can protect your dearest friend may not have to appear in a police court to give evidence as to his visit to one of this class of crime breeders? Well, you will say that Collingwood is not a fair comparison of conditions under Local Option. Well let us see what Orillia has to say.

Very often Orillia is pointed out as a model of the working of the Option by-law, and there is no doubt that it is much better than many other "dry" towns. But do the Police Court returns show that? We take liberty of quote from an Orillia paper as follows :

$1080 IN FINES

INFRACTIONS OF LIQUOR LICENSING

The criminal statistics for the town of Orillia for the past year, which closed on September 30, shows that 165 cases came up for trial before the magistrate there, an increase over last year. Of these 38 were dismissed, 22 let off on suspended sentences, 79 fined, and

PERSIA'S POET LAUREATE.

His Job, When He Had One, Was Anything but a Sinecure.

Persia is the only country besides England where a poet laureate has been officially maintained until recently.

Shah Muzaffer el Din in 1896 abolished the post of honor, which the court of Teheran for centuries had boasted. But the duties of the laureate of old Iran were far more onerous than those of his British confrere. Court etiquette demanded that whenever the "king of kings" traveled his entourage had to include a dwarf, a giant, a jester, a historiographer and a poet laureate.

The last two were kept busy, for, while the historiographer had to record for posterity all the doings and sayings of the shah (padi-shah), the laureate was called upon to celebrate a large proportion of these in verse. This cus-

DISEASES OF CIVILIZATION.

How Environment In Time Renders Humanity Immune.

Civilization brings a host of diseases in its train. The extremists of the back-to-nature cry have gone so far as to declare that civilization is a disease. But it is only just beginning to be clearly perceived that civilization is its own disease, that it preys upon itself, and that the aim of man is not to be civilized, but to avoid being civilized, though using to the full the opportunities that civilization affords.

Perhaps an illustration may make this quite clear. Measles is a definite germ disease. It is widely spread over the earth, but not by any means universally spread; for example, it seems to have been unknown among the North American Indians prior to the coming of the Spaniards. As a consequence, when an epidemic of measles strikes an Indian settlement the mortality is tremendous and in some cases an entire village has been swept away, every man, woman and child perishing from measles. Yet, among the white race, the disease has been so prevalent that it has become one of the common maladies of childhood and is hardly dreaded with regard to its fatal effect.

The white race, therefore, by having had these diseases for many thousand years has built up an organism that is almost immune, or in other words it has perfected its resistance to a hostile environment.

Especially is this true in the world of work and thought. Too hard work is one of the diseases of civilization. But the very fact of the compulsion of enduring life, although working too hard, has enabled a man or a woman to endure heavy toil and has developed the human race to that extent. Eight or ten hours of continuous toil to a race not accustomed to it would kill it off speedily. The same is true about thinking. The Bushman and Negroes, for example, can by no means follow a conversation with each other for more than two minutes, and when a white man learns their tongue and tries to talk to them, at the end of three or four minutes of questioning or attention in listening they fall to the ground in sheer dizziness and weariness or go temporarily mad under the strain. Yet, under the force of poverty, faithfulness of duty, the desire for fame or some such motive, men have worked all their lives 12 and 14 hours a day without suffering for it.

A Game That Lasts.

For the man who has once had the responsibility of coaching an eight-oared crew the task has an attraction which can't be resisted. Some one asked me once why it is that most college crew coaches make good chess players. I knew that the person who put the question didn't know much about the rowing game, for producing a successful eight-oared crew requires an amount of thinking which makes chess seem like pure recreation in comparison. Of course it's different from a chess problem in the fact that opponents don't always start with the same strength of forces, but this only adds to the fascination of trying to boat a winning combination.

LIVES BY HER WITS.

Only Its Sense of Humor Saved This Hen From Decapitation.

For some time, writes "Suburbanite" in the Glasgow News, one of my hens has been indulging itself in a practice that but for the little joke involved would have ended in its decapitation.

It is one of a pen of eight egg machines, or seven, rather, for its egg producing mechanism is considerably out of order, its best average being about one in the fortnight. Yet until recently that hen was scheduled on my book as the premier layer. That happened in this way:

Every morning when I made my appearance in the garden Nora (the hen) would be found clucking beside one of the eggs with all the force of its raucous throat.

If any of its sisters laid claim to the property there would be a wild flutter, and the audacious bird would continue her boasting when she had cleared her bill of feathers.

Some time ago I discovered her in the act of taking up her stand over the production of another hen, and a careful watch thereafter disclosed her true capabilities. A sense of humor is undoubtedly one of them, and this is being regarded as a saving grace, for I have decided to allow her to continue living by her wits.

Court etiquette demanded that when ever the "king of kings" traveled his entourage had to include a dwarf, a giant, a jester, a historiographer and a poet laureate.

The last two were kept busy, for, while the historiographer had to record for posterity all the doings and sayings of the shah (padi-shah), the laureate was called upon to celebrate a large proportion of these in verse. This custom was not so bad after all, and it was rigidly observed and followed up, for the shah, knowing that many of his deeds and utterances would be crystallized into an ode, on his imperial wandering felt bound to speak and to behave majestically, a thing that Muzaffer el Din, who abolished the laureateship, never did. — Philadelphia Ledger.

An Uncomplimentary Composer.

A young tenor, whose misfortune it was to be hideously ugly, waited on Cherubini one day and asked to be allowed to give a specimen of his vocal powers. For a wonder his application was met by a sulky nod of acquiescence. He sang, and sang superbly. There came another nod, accompanied by something like a snort of satisfaction. Then came a pause, which, after a minute or so, was broken by the youthful artist asking in faltering accents whether he might eventually hope for an engagement at the grand opera. "No!" thundered the director. "But, M. Cherubini!"— "No!" The disconsolate artist was slowly departing when Cherubini rose, took him by both arms and looked him fully in the face. "I am sorry," he said, "very sorry, but, mon cher, do you think that the opera could get up a company of orang outangs to sing with you?"—Sala's "Life and Adventures."

Worth the Penalty.

John, four years old, was trying to run the lawn mower, which he had been forbidden to touch.

His mother came to the door and told him to stop it, but John ran the mower down the strip of lawn and back again before he stopped.

"You will have to come into the house and stay for an hour," said his mother.

"Why did you run that mower after I told you to stop?" she asked.

"Well, mamma," said John, "I'd rather have run it twice and have to stay in the house for an hour than not run it at all."—National Monthly.

CASES IN POLICE COURT.

The criminal statistics for town of Orillia for the past which closed on September shows that 165 cases came up for trial before the magistrate there, an increase over last year. Of 38 were dismissed, 22 let off pending sentences, 79 fined, committed for trial, sent to the gaol or other provincial institution. The amount of fines imposed:

NORTHERN CROWN

ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT PEG ON DEC. 17TH.

A well-attended annual meeting of the shareholders of the Northern Crown Bank was held in the office of the bank in Winnipeg Tuesday, Dec. 17th. Sir Dan Millan, K. C. M. G., president, institution, presided.

The annual statement showing earnings of the year and the position which had been made of earnings was presented by Campbell, the general manager. Campbell's statement showed net earnings of the bank for the year after deducting expenses of management, payment of taxes, and necessary provision for interest depositors and for bad and doubtful debts, was $281,167. The amount of the credit of the profit and loss account on November 30th, 1911, was $181,673, making a total amount available for distribution in 1913 of $

TWO DIVIDENDS PAID.

During the year two semi-annual dividends at the rate of six per cent per annum was paid, one in June and one in December. The disbursement for this purpose amounted to $281,167, there was an ample balance of these receipts and the required for dividend payments. The paid-up capital is now $2,000,000, the earnings being thus almost 10 per cent of the capital.

No Place For Postmen.

The new postman was called the office superintendent for a moment.

"You were seen loitering in the neighborhood of that big fire down street," the superintendent said.

"I only stopped a minute," the postman pleaded, "and I was already 10 minutes ahead of schedule time."

"It is not a question of time, safety," the superintendent said. "The last place on earth a postman should afford to loiter is in the vicinity of big fire. On the contrary, he should make a detour to avoid it."

"By neglecting that simple precaution more than one postman has had his leather bag drenched by a stream of water and a lot of ruined mail charged to his conscience if not pocketbook."—New York Times.

sentences, 79 fined, and 20 ed to $1,294.65, of which $1,079.65 was paid, the balance going by default and terms in jail served in lieu of same.

Of those that were up, 72 appeared for being drunk or raising a disturbance on the streets. Of these 23 were dismissed, 3 sent to jail and 41 fined for a total of $327. Nine infractions of the Liquor License Act, mostly for selling liquor without a license, netted $715 in fines, while one served a term of three months in jail. Over 15 were up for assault and several of them fined, while others were let off on suspended sentence. About a dozen theft cases were heard in which two were committed to Barrie for trial and one sentenced to Mimico Industrial School, while another culprit served three months for obtaining money under false pretenses. Four vagrants were sent to the county goal for short terms. Most of the other cases were of a minor nature.

So we see that in Orillia where they say the law is observed, we find that out of a total of $1294.65, or about SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT, WAS FOR INFRACTIONS OF THE LIQUOR LICENSE ACT OR SELL-ING LIQUOR WITHOUT LICENSE.
Again you will note that 72 appeared for being drunk and disorderly on the streets and that the fines for this amounted to $327. Therefore, nearly the whole amount of the fines assessed were for illegal liquor selling or against drunks. Surely, these temperance advocates should take warning from the town which is boasted all over the province as the place where Local Option is a sure-enough success!

If any further proof is needed that immense quantities of liquor are being shipped into Orillia, all one has to do is to go to the Orillia station and watch the trunk loads of liquors being unloaded for private parties. In many cases young boys—boys who would not be served over a bar in a licensed house—are known to club together and send for a case or two regularly—often inviting young lads in their teens to join them. These boys are fast becoming whiskey drunkards.

Parents! Do you want your boys to form the whiskey habit in this way? Far better to use your good influence to teach the boy the demoralizing influence of excesses in all things—for this is where true temperance begins—in the home. And everyone who has read history knows that there never has been any way to legislate a people into temperance or any other reform.

Some of those canvassing for Local Option are reported to be telling that if Local Option carries the liquor stores will still remain to furnish you with any liquor that you want. This is entirely untrue. The liquor stores will close and will not be allowed to sell one ounce of liquor in Napanee.
This same story has been used in some other towns where campaigns were on, and if you have any doubt on the matter, ask the Chief of Police, Magistrate, or License Inspector.

Let us all look at this question fair-

NORTHERN CROWN BANK

ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT WINNIPEG ON DEC. 17TH.

Well-attended annual meeting of shareholders of the Northern Crown Bank was held in the head office of the bank in Winnipeg, Wednesday, Dec. 17th. Sir Daniel McLean, K. C. M. G., president, of the bank, presided. The annual statement showing the results of the year and the disposition which had been made of these results was presented by Robert Bell, the general manager. Mr. Bell's statement showed that the earnings of the bank for the year deducting expenses of management, payment of taxes, and making any provision for interest due to shareholders and for bad and doubtful debts was $281,167. The amount at the credit of the profit and loss account on November 30th, 1912, was $73, making a total amount available for distribution in 1913 of $462,840.

TWO DIVIDENDS PAID.

During the year two semi-annual dividends at the rate of six per cent. were paid, one in June and one in December. The disbursements for the purpose amounted to $165,563. The earnings of the bank were $281,167, there was an ample margin in these receipts and the amount available for dividend payments. The paid-up capital is now $2,811,804, the earnings being thus almost 100 per cent. of the capital.

The Siege of The Seven Suitors

By
MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nicholson

"I hope so," replied Cecilia brokenly. We were still at dinner when the cards of Dick and the other suitors I had last seen at the Prescott Arms were brought in; but Wiggins made no sign, and I wondered.

The man who looked after my needs handed me a note the next morning which added fresh hazards to Cecilia's already perilous plight.

"Left with the gardener before 6 o'clock by a boy from the village. Said it was most confidential, sir."

I waited till he had left the room before opening it. It read:

Gooseberry Bungalow,
Before breakfast.

Dear Chimneys—Pep stopped here yesterday to see B. H. He and C. old pals. Watch him. Where's Wig? H. H.

The information she conveyed was startling enough. We had been dealing with a company of suitors outside the barricade, now came warning of the presence of a strange knight within the gates who greatly multiplied the perils of the situation. The compact among the suitors at the inn was a thing of the past, and I now expected them to exercise all the ingenuity of which desperate lovers are capable in pressing their claims. The fact that both Wiggins and Pepperton were old friends of mine did not make my task easier. I not only felt it incumbent on me to prevent Dick, the holder of the clew, from taking advantage of it, but knowing Cecilia's own attitude of mind and heart toward Wiggins I wished to save Pepperton the pain of rejection if it could be done.

But what did Hezekiah mean by the question with which she ended her note? If Wiggins, smarting under Cecilia's treatment of him the day before, had quit the field here was a pretty how-d'ye-do. Miss Octavia's refusal to countenance telephones made it necessary for me to leave Hopefield to learn what had become of Wiggins, and I realized that I must act promptly if I saved the day for him. His conduct first and last had been spiritless, and I was out of patience with him. It seemed impossible to formulate any plan amid these multiplying uncertainties. If Wiggins had decamped Dick knew it and would lay his plans accordingly. I felt that it was base ingratitude on Wiggins' part to ask me to watch his interests while he went romping indifferently over the country. One or two consoling reflections remained, however—Dick believed me to be a suitor for Cecilia's hand, and this doubtless caused him considerable unthat as I glance back over these pages it looks odd to me!

As I paced the hall waiting for a horse to be saddled, Pepperton led me out on the terrace above the garden.

"I'm bursting with a great secret, old man. I'm going to be married."

"What?"

"I'm going to be married."

I grasped a chair to support myself. This was almost too much. Could it be possible that Hezekiah had miscalculated the list of rejections in the silver bound book, or that Cecilia herself had been deceived? Pepperton misread my agitation and with a hearty laugh clapped me on the shoulder.

"Oh, I'm not intruding on your preserves, old man! Cecilia is the second finest girl in the world—that's all. I'm engaged to Miss Gaylord of Stockbridge. I'm telling a few old friends, in advance of the formal announcement to be made next week at a dance the Gaylords are giving."

I crushed his hand in both my own and, seeing that he misconstrued the fervor of my emotion, I hastened to set myself aright.

"You're a lucky dog as usual, Pep. But you don't understand about Cecilia Hollister. It's not I—I'm not in the running at all, but Hartley Wiggins is! I'm here trying to help him score."

"What's this? You're here to represent Wiggy?"

"Well, he didn't exactly send me here, but when I came I found that Wiggy wasn't playing the game with quite the necessary zipology. There's more required than appears—a little of the dash and snap of the old adventurers—the ready tongue, the eager, thirsty sword!"

Pepperton pursed his lips and looked me over carefully with a twinkle in his eye.

"You are contributing those elements! You are Octaviaized—is that it?" Pepperton laughed until the tears came.

"I prefer Hollisterized as the broader term. Brother Bassford has it, too, and there's always Hezekiah!"

"Ah, Hezekiah the unpredictable! I knew there was a skirt fluttering somewhere. I saw her yesterday—stopped to see Bassford, who's a good old chap. Hezekiah of the teasing eyes was whitewashing the chicken coop, and Michelangelo couldn't have done it better."

"Pep," I said, lowering my voice, "if you love me keep close to Cecilia all day. You're an engaged man and in practice. Give an imitation of devotion. Keep her out of doors—keep male human beings away from her. Don't fail me in this. I've got to pull off the greatest coup of my life today. There's a band of outlaws hanging round here who will propose to Cecilia the first chance they get, and they must NOT. Wig's got to speak before night or lose out forever. No—not a word of explanation. You've got to take my word for it."

"I'll be the goat. Go ahead, but build a fire under Wiggins. I can't stay here forever."

Pepperton's engagement smoothed out one wrinkle, and I felt sure that I could trust him as an ally. The groom was holding my horse in the portecochere, and I mounted and rode away to the Prescott Arms.

I found Ormsby, Shallenberger, Arbutnot, Henderson, Hume and Gorse glumly sitting in a semicircle before the hall fireplace. Deepest gloom pervaded the inn. I have rarely seen melancholy so darkly stamped upon the was ill with diphtheria. I remember that it was Dick who rang the bell and gave our cards to the footman. It was quite singular, you know, our being turned away, unless something had been wrong."

I bowed gravely. They had been turned away for the very simple reason that after unearthing Adoniram Caldwell's effects in the secret rooms of her house Miss Octavia had not cared to be troubled with suitors. The haughty Nebraskan had drawn upon his imagination for the rest.

"And I understood you to say a moment ago that Miss Hollister's malady is not diphtheria, but chickenpox?" Shallenberger persisted with almost laughable trepidation. "These gentlemen, I regret to say, go so far as to doubt your word."

"That, Mr. Shallenberger, is their privilege. But it seems to me that when I merely tried to mitigate the terrible news imparted by Dick you are rank ingrates for questioning my far less doubtful story. Anything between you gentlemen and Mr. Dick is, of course, none of my affair, for whether considered as a set, group or bunch I am done with the whole lot of you. Farewell!"

I decided as I rode away that nothing was to be gained by going in search of Wiggins. Orton had purposely made his house difficult of access, and the roads in that neighborhood are many and devious. Orton had banished his guests that he might tinker with his play in peace and, knowing his temper, I was sure that Wiggins and the rest of them would keep out of his way till the pangs of hunger drove them back.

I had ridden half a mile toward Hopefield when I espied a woman riding rapidly toward me, and as she drew nearer I identified her as Hezekiah, mounted on a horse I recognized as one of the best in Miss Octavia's stables. Hezekiah rode astride, as a woman should, her bicycle skirt serving well as a habit. She rode as a boy rides who loves freedom and quickened pulses and the rush of wind across his face. She was hatless, for which the sun and I were both grateful. The big bow at the back of her head turned the dial back to sixteen.

She drew rein and fished what seemed to be salted almonds from her sweater pocket. She flipped one of these into the air and caught it in her mouth with a lazy toss of the head that showed the firm contour of her lovely throat. I had never seen her more self possessed.

"Do you care much for this horse?" she asked carelessly.

"It's a good horse. I fancy Miss Octavia thinks so herself. There are places, Hezekiah, where they hang people for horse stealing."

"Thought I might need one today, so I borrowed him through the back way to the old red barn. The coachman is an ancient chum, and Aunt Octavia would never mind even if she knew. And she will know, all right! Anyhow, my rear tire had been patched once too often, and there is a satisfaction in a horse. Where's our sensitive and impressionable Wiggy? Saw him riding over toward Kisco yesterday p. m. with chin on his chest—dreadful riding form."

"Wiggins is at Orton's—the playwright's, you know. I've telephoned him to hustle back, but he's out of our reach somewhere. I couldn't speak to him direct; had to leave a message for him."

One or two consoling reflections remained, however—Dick believed me to be a suitor for Cecilia's hand, and this doubtless caused him considerable uneasiness, and he did not know that Pepperton, whose acquaintance with Cecilia antedated the European flight, had to be reckoned with. I wished Pepperton had kept out of it.

Breakfast that morning was interminably long. Miss Octavia was never more thoroughly amusing, never more drolly inadvertent. She attacked Pepperton for all the evils in American architecture and in particular took him to task for some house he had built at Newport which she pronounced the most hideous pile of marble on American soil.

When we left the table at about half past 10 Miss Octavia insisted that we must visit the kennels. A friend had just sent her a fine Alfrede, and she wished to make sure the kennel master was treating the dog properly. Later we were all to ride.

"I'm going to be married."

I made haste to excuse myself, saying that personal matters required attention.

"Certainly, Arnold; you shall do as you like. Mr. Pepperton is a difficult bird to catch, so we hope for you at luncheon, and of course we expect you for dinner."

Pepperton looked at me inquiringly. I judged that he had known Miss Octavia a good many years—the tone of their intercourse was intimate, and yet he plainly was at a loss to understand just how I came to be so thoroughly established in her good graces. I confess one wrinkle, and I felt sure that I could trust him as an ally. The groom was holding my horse in the portecochere, and I mounted and rode away to the Prescott Arms.

I found Ormsby, Shallenberger, Arbutnot, Henderson, Hume and Gorse glumly sitting in a semicircle before the hall fireplace. Deepest gloom pervaded the inn. I have rarely seen melancholy so darkly stamped upon the human countenance. They turned indifferently and glared as they recognized me. Shallenberger alone rose and greeted me.

"I hope there is no bad news," he said chokingly.

"Bad news?"

"I mean Miss Hollister—Miss Cecilia. We were all deeply grieved last night to hear of her sudden illness. There's always something so terrible in the very name of diphtheria."

My wits had been so sharpened by my late adventures that I readily accounted for these false tidings. Dick was absent. Dick alone would have been equal to this diabolical plot for keeping his rival suitors away from Hopefield. The despair in those faces taxed my gravity severely.

"It is extremely sad, but the first diagnosis was erroneous," I answered. "I think it more likely to prove to be chicken pox when the truth is known."

"Not diphtheria?"

"No immediate danger of diphtheria. I assure you," I replied, "though of course with winter coming on and all that, one must be prepared for the worst."

While he repeated this to the others I sought the clerk, who promptly handed me a note which Wiggins had left late the previous afternoon; to be delivered in case I called. He had gone to spend a day or two with Orton, the playwright, who was at his country house, in the hills beyond Mount Kisco, rehearsing a new piece, in which a friend of Hartley's was to star. I gained the telephone booth in one jump, and in five minutes I was bawling wildly into Orton's ear. I had known him well in the Hare and Tortoise, and he answered my demand for Wiggins with the heart-breaking news that Hartley had ridden off with some other guests in the house, Orton didn't know where.

"I threw them out. I've got to rewrite my third act. I don't care whether they ever come back," boomed Orton's voice.

"If you don't send Wiggins back to me at Hopefield as fast as he can get there, my third act is ruined."

"What?"

"Tell Wiggins to come back on the run. Tell him the world's coming to an end any minute."

"I'll be glad to get rid of him," snapped Orton, in the hurried tone of a man whose third act has wilted in rehearsal.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Hezekiah Partitions the Kingdom.

AS I came perspiring out of the telephone booth I found the suitors engaged in subdued debate by the hearth. They could hardly have heard my bleatings over the telephone, but they were greatly concerned about something. Shallenberger, who was apparently the only one willing to approach me, followed me to the veranda.

"Those fellows in there don't understand this. Dick told us last night, after we had called at the house and been refused admittance, that Miss Cecilia was on a horse, where's our sensitive and impressionable Wiggy? Saw him riding over toward Kisco yesterday p. m. with chin on his chest—dreadful riding form."

"Wiggins is at Orton's—the playwright's, you know. I've telephoned him to hustle back, but he's out of our reach somewhere. I couldn't speak to him direct; had to leave a message for him."

"Just like Wiggy to die on the last lap. What did you make out of Brotherton Pepperton?"

"Your note scared me—thanks so much for your note—but he's all right. Engaged to another girl."

"Ah," she sighed, "the comforting that Cecilia couldn't keep them all going all the time."

We rode along together, our horses in a walk, and I told her everything I knew of the condition of affairs, including a true account of my experiences at the inn the day before and of the finding of the old chest belonging to Wiggins' great-grandfather—her brown eyes opened wide at this—concluding with the diphtheria stratagem and Dick's menace to Cecilia's happiness.

"He's really a bright little boy. Coming home on the steamer he gave me a post graduate course in pragmatism that I've found helpful in keeping house for papa. It's too bad we have to lay a trap for Mr. Dick."

"Is it? Just how are we to manage that, Hezekiah?"

"Oh, that will be easy enough. He's pretty desperate, and since the compact between the suitors has gone to pieces he knows he will have to show his hand pretty soon. He thinks you are wild about Cecilia. He lays great stress on his thinking powers, and he probably argues that you are bound to pop pretty soon. It's just as well he thinks so, but we must finish this up today. I'll be a nervous wreck if we don't close the books tonight. There's your friend Dick now."

She indicated a high point in the main road, where it crossed the ridge from which she had shown me—it seemed, oh, very long ago!—the procession of suitors crossing the stile. Dick, mounted, was gazing off across the fields toward Hopefield. Man and horse were so distant as to create the illusion of an equestrian statue on a high pedestal.

"Napoleon before Waterloo," I suggested.

"He does look like Napoleon, doesn't he?" she laughed. "He's a bit fussed today. He knows that Wiggy's not at the inn and that you are up to something, and to little Mr. Dick the architect probably looks like one of those mysterious knights you read about, who suddenly appears at the tournament all canned in an ice cream freezer, with a tin pail over his head. Mr. Pepperton's presence no doubt worries him, as I don't think they ever met. Cecilia and Mr. Pepperton are riding. I dodged them just before I struck you, walking their horses in the most loverlike fashion in a lane over yonder, but if Mr. Pepperton is really engaged it's all right, though if I were the other girl I think I'd be anxious."

"Pep's playing the game, that's all. What are you going to do now?"

She glanced at the sun. I fancied that it was with such a scanning of the heavens that her sisters a thousand years before had noted the time.

"This is my pie day. There's undoubtedly a gooseberry pie waiting for me at the bungalow. And papa will

"Dash! There's a rumor that are terribly ill. They've come to pay their tribute of respect by lying in the garden. You had better quietly into the house. The sh seeing you in your usual health be too much for them."

"But I can't. I must be accessible all times," she cried, looking help from me to Pepperton, who was sea for an explanation. "If that is slon is abroad I shall appear at it."

"Then you and Pepperton must the terrace here. You are for all I know. Ignore them utter your absorption with one another any one approaches you, Pepp ask Miss Hollister to marry you."

"Me!" gasped Pepperton.

"No. It can't be done that Cecilia interposed. "Mr. Pepperton told me of his engagement. I can party to a fraud—a trick. I can't tolerate it at all. It would ruin thing."

"Then stay right here. Pace and forth and I'll manage the re don't for the life of me know how I'll do it."

As Cecilia and Pepperton si from behind the screen of vines men on the benches lifted their then I heard murmurs of amazement and chagrin and caught a glimpse of Dick tearing through hedge with his late companionous bling after in fierce pursuit.

I ran to the stable and for horse, feeling that I must be in a tion to move rapidly if I saw W approaching. If Dick eluded wrathful pursuers he would be lookout somewhere, awaiting his time, and if he saw Wiggins ready for the house he might y cument us.

I satisfied myself that Cecilia Pepperton were still plainly from the garden, and I knew th the time she was safe. I gained high point in the road from Hezekiah and I had observed Di guard at noon and waited. Remembering the fine figure the philosopher made against the sky, I dismounted and rested by a stone wall which could watch with less risk of seen from a distance.

I at once saw matters that interested me immensely. Dick had thrown the other suitors and was crossing the fields toward Hopefield. When I caught sight of him he just leaving the orchard where Hezekiah and I had held our memorandum interview. A long stretch of pasture lay before him, and he s down to a quick trot. He took fences without lessening his crossed the stile like a flash a later and was out of sight.

and was urging him on. As they came nearer I saw that Wiggins had taken fire at last.

"Orton said some one was killed—who—what—who?"

"I just picked him up five minutes ago. He doesn't know anything," said Hezekiah, "and you daren't tell him. Remember the rules. What's doing?" she inquired coolly.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Seventh Man.

HZEKIAH bade Wiggins ex- change horses with her, and while he was readjusting the saddle girths I explained to Hezekiah the situation at Hopefield and told her of Dick's scamper across the fields.

"There's no use fooling with this thing any more. I'll take Wiggy to the house and lock him up until I've been numbered six. It's safest."

"Not much it isn't. I don't intend that Cecilia shall have the pleasure of refusing you."

"I'd like to know why not. It's only to fill the gap."

"Oh," said Hezekiah, "that would be an embarrassment to me all the rest of my life. Listen carefully. Take Wiggy in by the back way and give him a picture book to look at. Leave Cecilia alone on the terrace when you're all ready and see what happens. If Dick's on his way to the house he's going to do something, and he must feel the edge of my displeasure. I owe him a few on general principles."

"What does all this mean? You say there's nothing wrong at the house?" began Wiggins as we left Hezekiah and started toward Hopefield.

"Nothing whatever the matter. Ev- erything perfectly all right, but you've got to keep mum now and do what I tell you. I've worked hard for you, old man, and when it's all over I'm going to send you a bill for professional serv- ices. Come."

I urged my horse to his utmost, and Wiggins rode steadily beside me. The fright Orton had given him had done my friend good, and I felt that I was dealing with a live man at last.

"I'll tell you all about this after we have a good night cigar tonight."

We rode direct to the stable, and I took Wiggins to my room by the back stairs and bade him help himself to my raiment. He was perfectly tractable, and I was glad to see that he trusted implicitly to my guidance.

I met Miss Octavia in the lower hall. She was just in from the kennels.

"I hope, Arnold, that you have not been without entertainment. By the way, if you should by any chance see Hezekiah you will kindly intimate to her that if she returns that mare she borrowed this morning in reasonably good condition I will overlook her in- discretion in taking it from the stable without permission."

She did not wait for a reply, but continued on to her room, and I went direct to the terrace. Cecilia and Pepperton were just going into the house to look up a book or piece of music which they had been discussing. Cecilia was making herself interesting, as she so well knew how to do, and she seemed in no wise anxious.

"We had forgotten tea," she said. "Aunt Octavia has just ordered it."

"She and Mr. Pepperton may have their tea. I believe the air outside will do you good for a little longer—so if you don't mind Pepperton, Miss Hel-you don't mind, Pepperton, Miss Hollister will resume her promenade alone."

Pep had told me since that he thought me quite mad that afternoon.
I bade Cecilia patrol the long terrace slowly. She turned up the collar of the covert coat and obeyed, laughing a little nervously, but asking no questions. The scene could not have been more charmingly set. The great house loomed darkly behind her; beneath lay the garden, over which the dusk was stealing goldenly.

She paused suddenly as I watched from the window, and I stepped out to see what had attracted her attention.
There into the garden from its farthest entrance filed the six suitors who had previously come to sit beneath the windows of their stricken lady. Having failed to visit their wrath upon the perfidious Dick they had changed their clothes and returned to Hope-field. If Hezekiah had not expressly commanded me not to become the sixth man, I should have offered myself on the spot and waited only until Cecilia had made the inevitable answer before summoning Wiggins to end the whole affair. Such, however, was not to be the order of events.

The procession, headed by Ormsby, was within a few yards of the terrace.
Cecilia, apparently unconscious of their proximity, continued her promenade.
In a moment she must recognize them,
ask them into the house, give them tea and otherwise destroy my hope of securing her happiness before the day's end.

A chorus of yelps and barks, as of dogs suddenly released, greeted my ear. The oncoming suitors heard it, too, and the line wobbled uncertainly.
Then round the house swept mastiffs, hounds, terriers—a collection of prize winners such as few kennels ever boasted—loping gayly in unwonted freedom toward unknown and forbidden pastures.

The vanguard of fox terriers leaped down into the garden, with the rest of the pack at their heels. Happy dogs, to find grown men ready for a gambol! Four of the suitors found one of the proper exits into the road; two leaped the box hedge on the other side without shaking a leaf.

I ran round the house, stumbling through the rear guard of the truant canines and passing the kennel master, who had rallied the stable men and was in hot pursuit.

Do Not Live in an Unwired House

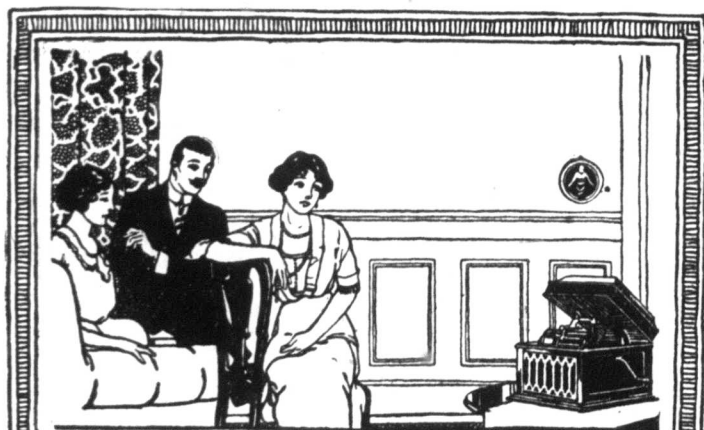

Electric Lighting is not a Luxury,
It is a Necessity now-a-days.

People to-day realize that Electric Lighting means comfort, con-than matches. The electric lamp, safely enclosed in its air tight bulb, does not vitiate or contaminate the air of living and sleeping rooms.

And now, since we have the new

RATIONS FOR THE FOWLS.

Any fairly intelligent person may improvise a hen ration containing all the requisites, provided he has read and thought the matter over enough to understand the different properties of the different grains. Corn is usually the most abundant grain upon the farm, and a great many fall into the error of believing that if fed in proper quantities it will promote growth and development in the young fowls and also cause the hens to lay well. Experiments and tests have proved, however, that corn alone is one of the poorest grains with which to accomplish the above named results. The reason for this is that corn is a fattening food, and hens allowed free access to it will lay on a surplus of fat, instead of laying eggs.

INSECTS IN STORED GRAIN.

Carbon Bisulphide Most Effective Weapon In Fighting Pests.

The insects most destructive to stored grain are the grain weevils and grain moths. These insects infest such farm products as corn, milo maize, Kaffir corn, millet, wheat, barley, rye, peas, beans, etc. The life history of the grain moth and the grain weevil is a very interesting study. Just before the harvest begins the adult insect punctures the unmaturing grain while standing in the field and deposits her eggs, which remain dormant until the grain is cured, harvested and stored. Soon after storing the eggs hatch into little white legless grubs or larvae, which feed on the kernel of the grain.

It is in this stage that the insect does its deadly work, becoming full grown in a few weeks, later changing into a pupa and finally emerging as an imago or adult.

One of the best insecticides recommended for the destruction of insect life of this kind is carbon bisulphide. This compound may be secured from the local druggist at a cost of 25 to 30 cents per pound. It is a colorless, volatile oil, heavier than water, possessing a characteristic odor and having highly inflammable properties. So in using caution must be taken that no fire in any form comes near it.

From one and one-half to two pounds of carbon bisulphide is sufficient to fumigate one ton of grain. It is necessary to have the granary as nearly air tight as possible. Place in the center of the grain heap a small utensil containing old rags, cotton or tow. Calculate the amount of grain in the bin and determine the number of pounds of carbon bisulphide necessary to use in fumigation. Measure the chemical compound and pour into the utensil and cover the entire mass of grain and utensil with canvas. A gas will be given off which is poisonous and heavier than air. The fumes take a downward course and destroy the insects.

If the first application is not sufficient repeat at intervals of six weeks until no form of insect life is found. In using carbon bisulphide the milling qualities, taste and odor of the grain are not affected, and the germinating power of seed is decreased very little.—National Stockman and Farmer.

An idle acre is like an idle man—of no more use than a dead one and takes up more room.—Kansas Farmer.

BEES.

When the hives are well distributed in a certain space their inmates may be more easily handled. It seems to improve the disposition, especially if there are some trees or shrubs about it. Robbing is not prevalent either, and the absence of that always helps to make bees better natured.

A good fall flow of honey is not an unmixd good, for careful trials have shown that there is a superabundance of pollen grains in this honey which does not make it the most desirable for winter stores, and the presence of the pollen has a tendency to bring on dysentery with the bees, especially if they are wintered in the cellar without an occasional cleansing flight, which the outdoor winter protected bees have. This is a mighty good argument in favor of wintering bees outdoors.

HANDLING THE UNRULY BULL.

A good way to restrain an unruly bull is described in the Breeder's Gazette:

Have a covering made of good harness leather from a pattern of the animal's head. Fit a piece over the front, having it extend out so as to take a good seam on each side and allow plenty of room about the eyes, then fit pieces to come down on each cheek, four or five inches wide. Have these pieces securely sewed and riveted with the seam upon the outside.

If the animal has horns the hood is easily fastened on. If not make a strong, snug fitting halter with straps to fasten the hood securely under the jaw and around the ears. The whole contrivance needs to be strong and well fitted, as a bull will give it a first class trial.

UTILIZING ASH SUPPLY.

Material From Both Coal and Wood Has Fertilizing Values.

As the time approaches to clean up ash pits and bins and to distribute ash piles it is well to remind farmers and gardeners of the value of this product.

When conditions are favorable it is most economical to spread the ashes where they are needed through the winter, as then none of the fertilizing properties are lost.

Even coal ashes may be put upon the land if the coarser portions are raked or sifted out, and these clinkers will serve as drainage or foundations for walks about the barnyard and poultry yard. Chickens also find something they want in the ashes.

Fine coal ashes may be worked into a clay soil with the very good effect of rendering it more porous as well as supplying some of the chemicals necessary to the growth of plants.

For fertilizing the lawn nothing is better than fine wood ashes, but if distributed during the winter and early spring the result will be almost too heavy a growth of grass, necessitating very frequent mowing.

The application of two scuttles of hardwood ashes to a tree produced the largest and finest Seckel pears ever harvested from a certain orchard in St. Louis county, Mo., the fruit ripening from day to day during six weeks.

All small fruits and orchard trees are benefited by a treatment of ashes, and borers that work around the base of the trunk of trees are almost entirely prevented from entering the bark.

A moderate amount of ashes and soot worked into the soil around roses greatly increases the richness and brillance of coloring in the blossom, makes fine foliage. Care must be taken not to loosen the roots, as rose a rich, firm soil.

The scrapings from the barnyard there be a cow, the droppings from chicken house, with ashes, will multiply almost all the enriching for a of two acres.—Farm Progress.

When in Search of a New Sweet Try Banana Titbits.

Here is a novel idea for a sweet dish: Peel and split a banana, lay both halves together on a large plate, says Table Talk. On the top of the banana put a layer of vanilla ice cream, and over this put a little grated or crushed pineapple, a few chopped almonds or nuts, and lastly one tablespoonful of whipped and sweetened cream on top and finish with a cherry placed in the center of the cream.

Now for a delicious sweet titbit: Roll out some pastry very thin into a length about sixteen inches, cut this into strips one inch wide, wet along one edge of each, butter some cornet molds on the outside and wrap round the pastry, allowing the wetted side to wrap over each fold; brush over the top with a little beaten egg, bake in a hot oven for twelve minutes, and then allow to get quite cold. Beat up one cupful of cream, add one tablespoonful of sugar and one teaspoonful of vanilla extract, and with this fill each of the cases. Decorate with small pieces of angelica.

A CLEVER IDEA.

Cunning Way to Use Irish Lace Collars on Lingerie.

"What a perfectly darling gown!" cried a girl ecstatically as she bent over a trousseau in the making. "I knew you'd rave over that yoke, Bess," the pleased owner commented.

"But where did you get it? I didn't know that they sold yokes like that for nightdresses. And it's real Irish too!"

"That's the best part of it," laughed the pretty owner complacently. "I didn't buy it, and I've two more gowns with Irish yokes handsomer than that one. That is," she went on, feeling obliged to modify the buying statement, "they weren't bought for the gowns. You see, Bess, they're just every day Irish-Dutch"—and here they both tittered—"collars. I had three that I really didn't need for neckwear, and mother suggested that I make yokes of them. They're just the right size for yokes, and one couldn't ask

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Don't Gossip, Girls; Maybe You'll Be Just as Interesting.

NEGLIGEE MADE OF FROCK.

Lots of Suggestions For Christmas Gifts to Be Picked Up by Prowling Around the Big Shops—Charming Present For the New Baby.

Dear Elsa—You're always amused at Margaret A.'s latest notions in fashion, so here's the dernier cri—don't gossip. This is the way she carries out her methods:

"Oh, Margaret," a gossiping friend will begin, "have you heard the last piece of news?"

"That tomorrow is going to be very cold?" interrupts Margaret, good naturedly. "Yes; isn't that delightful? I like cold weather."

Not yet put out of commission, the friend will go on, "But as I was going downtown I met Louise W., and she told me"—

"No, I don't like mission furniture," Margaret will interrupt. "I am devoted to mahogany, with yellow walls and enameled white trim. I have just finished reading a most interesting book on interior decoration, which has given me some lovely ideas. Would you like to see the book?" And with that Margaret will trot out the new volume, and gradually the conversation will drift into less personal channels.

I really think that Margaret carries her bad almost to the point of rudeness, but she certainly has the right idea. Gossip is so purposeless and often does a lot of harm. It's interesting surely; no one will deny that. Still if there were less aimless chatter the world would be a wiser and a better place.

It's awfully hard, though, to stop gossiping suddenly—unless one has a whole heap of self control and a strong impelling purpose, but I am going to try the effect of a little wholesome curtailment of "Do you know?" and "Have you heard?" in my talk.

Having unloaded all this wisdom upon you, let's turn to frivolous subjects. You ought to see the pretty negligee I made out of my old white crape dress. I always liked the dress, it was so soft and fluffy looking and certainly wore beautifully. The material is still good, but I was afraid to appear in that costume again, for fear my friends would think I never had any new clothes.

So I washed and ironed the skirt. By the way, Elsa, remember in washing silk crape to use only lukewarm water and not to rub soap on the material; also when you rinse it try to keep the water at the same temperature and be sure to get all the soap out of it. When it was clean the silk looked as good as new, so I cut a square measuring a yard on each side. From one corner I cut diagonally to the center, making the opening for the front. At the center I cut a circle big enough for the neck about four inches in diameter. I had a pretty embroidered batiste collar about three inches

A CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Tortured Four Years Until He Took "Fruit-a-tives"

RIDGETOWN, ONT., May 21st. 1913. "Your 'Fruit-a-tives' cured me of Rheumatism. It was the only medicine that made any impression on me. I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism. I was laid up for four winters with Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism, and was a cripple completely, not being able to do anything. I doctored with four different physicians, but they did not help me. Other advertised remedies were equally unsatisfactory, and I have taken several.

Some neighbor of mine told me that 'Fruit-a-tives' helped him, and I took them faithfully every day and the result was marvellous. For over two years now, I have been free from any Rheumatic pains whatever, and give 'Fruit-a-tives' the full credit for making a remarkable cure."

W. T. RACHER

If you are subject to Rheumatic Attacks, Sciatica, Lumbago or Neuralgia, take 'Fruit-a-tives' right now and start the permanent cure which 'Fruit-a-tives' will complete if taken faithfully. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A HOOD WRAP.

Protection From Cold For the Woman Who Does Her Own Work.

It isn't because you're growing older and less strong, Mrs. Small Village, that you so readily take colds in winter. It's because times innumerable each day you rush from a hot kitchen out of doors. There isn't time to wrap up before starting on an errand to the barn, the corn house or poultry yard, yet at each one of these places you stay longer than you meant to, and you stand in drafts, the quickest of cold causers.

What you need is a hood wrap to hang from a nail beside the kitchen door, where it may conveniently be picked up and put on as you leave the house. The hood wrap is merely a one yard wide by two yards long strip of woolen material and may be evolved from something that's in every house—an old woolen shawl, an army blanket or even a clean horse blanket. Along the center of one edge of this strip should be attached the band of a loose hood, cut like a huge circle from whatever worsted material is available and shirred at the edge over a flat elastic band—in fact, a copy of Red Riding Hood's headgear. It is a good plan to line the hood wrap with the remnants of an old skin or rubberized silk coat, so that it may be turned wrong side outward for use during a shower of rain or snow.

Clothesline That Winds Up.

It is often convenient to quickly hang up a few pieces when it is not necessary to use the large line in the yard or back inclosure. A little novelty of this kind is just out, which consists of a covered hood reel for the line, which has a hook at one end which can fasten one. That is," she went on, feeling obliged to modify the buying statement, "they weren't bought for the gowns. You see, Bess, they're just every day Irish-Dutch"—and here they both tittered—"collars. I had three that I really didn't need for neckwear, and mother suggested that I make yokes of them. They're just the right size for yokes, and one couldn't ask for a finer gown than one of soft mainsook decked with numerous clusters of tiny pin tucks under an Irish-Dutch collar yoke and tucked across the back, finished off with a valenciennes edge and inset designs of valenciennes insertion. Try it and see. The collars curve beautifully over the front of the gown and just come to the shoulder seams."

For the Linen Closet.

The housewife, whether she be a novice returning from her honeymoon to the new home or the housekeeper of many years, will be delighted with a bag of lavender flowers. Our grandmothers many, many years ago discovered the potency of the lavender flowers and scattered them among the snowy linen. The slight but delicate fragrance that was imparted to the sheets and pillowcases was most refreshing and pleasing to the weary sojourner when he or she sought the bed. No adequate substitute for the lavender flowers has ever been found, and the demand for them is quite as strong today as in previous years. A fresh supply is just now adding to the attractions of the toilet counters, and the bags at 25 cents are finding many purchasers.

Use For Magazine Covers.

Many of the pretty prints which now come with newspapers and as covers on magazines can be made to look like oil paintings by being treated in the following manner:

Mix together one ounce of Canada balsam and two ounces of spirits of turpentine. The print or drawing must first be sized with a solution of isinglass in ice water. When this is dry take a camel's hair brush and apply the composition and the result will be astonishing.

Automobile Runs.

One-tenth of the automobiles of this country are owned in New York.

In Washington an automobile cannot pass a street car headed in the same direction while passengers are getting on or off. It must stop.

Automobile tires that are filled with puncture repairing solutions have been provided by an inventor with a quick repair boot for preventing loss of the solution through large cuts.

Flower and Tree.

Olive trees yield a full crop only every alternate year.

Dying plants can sometimes be revived by pouring a teaspoonful of castor oil about the roots.

By judicious grafting upon trees of Chinese origin Spanish fruit growers have been able to produce trees which bear oranges of better quality and which are productive for 300 years.

ture and be sure to get all the soap out of it. When it was clean the silk looked as good as new, so I cut a square measuring a yard on each side. From one corner I cut diagonally to the center, making the opening for the front. At the center I cut a circle big enough for the neck about four inches in diameter. I had a pretty embroidered batiste collar about three inches deep which I sewed around the neck to give a becoming finish. Then the edges were turned in and hemmed and val lace sewed all the way around the negligee.

The sleeves were formed by simply stitching the edges of the material together and turning up the points, which fall on the outside of the arm, and finishing with pink satin ribbon bows. I put a bow of the same color at the neck. The first time I wore it at the matinee Dick pronounced it "some dud."

Many of my ideas for Christmas gifts I am getting these autumn days from prowls about the big shops. Yesterday I saw the prettiest strap for a baby's gcart—just the thing for Mary's new son, I mentally ejaculated.

The strap was quite expensive, and after examining it closely I went home to try to reproduce it. I bought a yard of elastic an inch and a half wide that comes with the blue satin ribbon shirred on. On both ends I put strap fasteners, which I purchased in a hardware store. I then made three little rosettes of blue ribbon, and in each of these I put the smallest pink rose I could buy. From each of the rosettes I hung narrow blue ribbon about half a yard long, and on the ends I sewed a small celluloid doll, an ivory ring and a celluloid dog.

The little strap was a beauty, as good looking as the expensive one in the shop. It is now reposing packed and ready for shipment in my "Christmas present chest."

Well, I've had a look at the militant suffragette from England, Mrs. Pankhurst, and really, dear, she is a very inoffensive looking "bad" lady—not a suggestion of the bomb throwing species about her. Still when one gets a good glance into her eyes they fairly blaze forth determination. It's very hard for an American to understand the English way of conducting the suffrage struggle. But perhaps this will show the type of man they have over there:

I was presented to an Englishman recently, and the conversation turned to suffrage and the death of Emily Post, the first martyr to the cause.

I remarked upon the tragic manner of her passing away.

"Yes," said the Englishman sympathetically, "she destroyed a racehorse, God's noblest work."

Perfect brute of a man, wasn't he? Devotedly yours, MAHEU.

OR SHOW.

Clothesline That Winds Up.

It is often convenient to quickly hang up a few pieces when it is not necessary to use the large line in the yard or back inclosure. A little novelty of this kind is just out, which consists of a covered hood reel for the line, which has a hook at one end which can fasten up wherever needed. The line has a little lever which will cause it to wind itself up when not in use. Each line is about twenty-five feet. It is particularly adaptable to use on the porch, where a few stockings, baby shirts, etc., can be hung up in the morning, without stepping off the porch, and the line quickly put away when not in use.

Opera House, Napanee, Canadian Jubilee Singers.

In a day long past, many music lovers favoured a company whose basso could "bellow" loudest, thus obscuring the other voices, or one whose soprano could shriek out the shrillest note whether it was musical or not. But we now live in a day when the average musical taste is cultivated. We realize that what the people want in chorus work is pure harmony and perfect voice blending with no particular voice standing out more prominent than the rest, but every voice having sufficient distinctness to be heard and appreciated. With this idea in mind may we say that in forming our present company we aimed to procure all "stars" but no "satellites." To show off individual ability we give, at certain points in our program, full sway to our soloists, but in our choruses all our singers are equally great. One night only at the opera house, Wednesday, Jan. 7th. Admission 15 and 25 cents.

Before and After.

When a man is in love with a girl he holds her hands so tightly that it would seem he is trying to keep her from getting away. After they are married awhile she has to hold his coat tails to keep him at home.—Florida Times-Union.

Poor Papa.

"Karl, let's play papa and mamma.
I'll be mamma."
"Oh, no. You're much too stupid for that. You be papa.—Fliegende Blatter.

A Coming Man.

Griggs—Then you don't look upon Sharpe as a coming man? Briggs—No, but I would if I was in charge of the penitentiary.—Boston Transcript.

After weariness come rest, peace,
joy, if we be worthy.—Newman.

A Berlin correspondent of the Scientific American describes an interesting experiment that was made at the works of one of the large German manufacturing firms with one of their lifting magnets.

A chain, fastened to the ground and carrying an iron ball at its free end, was raised to a vertical position by the approach of the great lifting magnet suspended from a crane.

The attraction of the magnet was so strong that the chain remained in a perfectly vertical position. A grown-up workman climbed up the chain without disturbing its rigidity in the least. The chain seemed to float in air.
The magnetic pull on the ball was greater than the gravitational pull on the man.

This remarkable experiment shows the enormous power of attraction exerted by the lifting magnets that are used in iron and steel works to carry about iron material of every description. The magnets enable the operator to seize iron material at any point desired and convey it to any other point within the range of the crane.
Incidentally the use of lifting magnets has greatly diminished the risk of accidents in the moving of heavy masses of iron.
